Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

Western Region

Saturday, September 17

- Gusty winds of 15-25 mph across much of the state today into Sunday will slightly increase fire weather concerns, especially over the Sierra and southern mountains
- Widespread light to moderate rainfall is expected for northern and central California beginning late today and continuing through the first half of the week
  - The rainfall will primarily be beneficial for the state, and there are not currently any significant burn scar concerns. However, isolated burn scar impacts are not out of the question, as the chance of thunderstorms increases Sunday and Monday.
  - Greatest rainfall amounts in the North Bay areas with 1 to 3 inches Saturday evening through Tuesday, with highest amounts Sunday into Monday
  - Coastal Mountain ranges like the Santa Cruz and Santa Lucia's generally 1 to 2 inches of rainfall expected Saturday evening through Tuesday
  - Some light snow is also possible above about 8500 feet above sea level over the high Sierra Sunday through Wednesday, though no significant accumulation is expected at this time
- Drier weather will develop for much of the state for Thursday and Friday
